

Document Manager enables all physical and digital documents relating to an employee to be captured and stored, including emails.

Managing the increasing volume of Human Resources documents

The volume of documents that Human Resources (HR) departments handle each year is growing rapidly due to changes in legislation.

With normal staff turnover, large businesses handle thousands of P60s, P45s, P11Ds and other workforce contracts and documents each year. This workload is now compounded by the need to control more migrant worker permits and visas.

It is becoming increasingly important for employers to have an effective solution to manage their HR documentation.

Standard HR solutions help streamline staff management, but they are not designed to handle physical, non-standard, multiple-page, multiple-version documents like operator licences, qualification certificates, CRB checks, training records and visas.

To comply with legislation, these documents must be managed effectively and retained for many years – generating large volumes of documents over time.

Document Manager streamlines HR document management

The Document Manager solution helps HR Managers capture and associate documents with employees in a digital format, eliminating the need for physical document storage. Document Manager integrates seamlessly with HR and Payroll applications and gives users access to documents via a desktop client or Web interface.

Document Manager works within existing HR solutions as a 'request and retrieve' tool, operated via the existing solution user interface (UI). This makes it very accessible for users and ensures all security protocols within the existing HR solution are enforced.

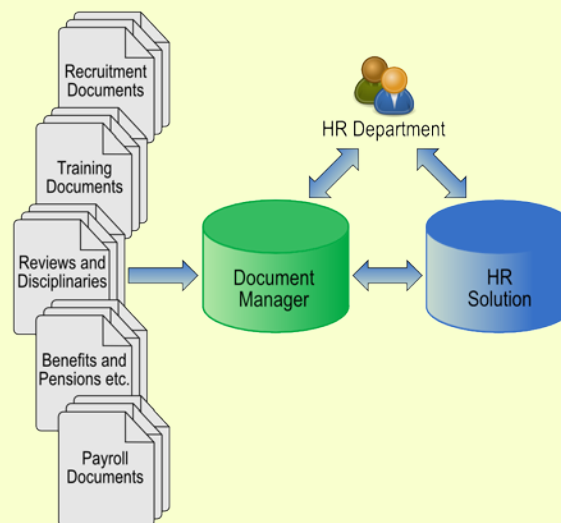

Document Manager is highly configurable. The folders can be structured to meet the exact needs of the business, enabling rapid data retrieval for effective HR management.

Document Manager enables all physical and digital documents relating to an employee to be captured and stored, including emails. These may be required during HR or legal proceedings. All documents scanned into Document Manager are admissible in court in their electronic form.
